

sinclair
boadcasting's
decision to air an extended attack ad
masquerading as a
documentary strikes
me as blatant
disregard for the public interest.
It's nothing short
of electioneering.
were they to air a
documentary with a
competing point of
view as well,
sinclair could claim
it served the
interest of public
debate, but as it
stands they're just
abusing their
consolidated power,
and the FCC is
letting them do it.
